Hanoi is calling for investment

Hanoi, the capital of Vietnam, has been previously known as a political, cultural, and historical destination, but nowadays it is also known as a business destination. During the first eight months of 2019, Hanoi has attracted 6.15 billion US dollars of foreign direct investment (FDI), establishing itself as the country's top FDI destination this year. The city has made tremendous strides to support business operation within the city and improve the investment environment in order to remain the most appealing destination for foreign investment in Vietnam. The city is welcoming foreign investors in bio-technology, education, healthcare, pharmaceuticals, environment, waste treatment, and smart transport.
